Some recent TV programmes on 'green make-overs' might lead you to think that eco-refurbishments are all about adding solar panels and recycling bins.

In this training course you'll learn from The Green Register's expert trainers that it is a more complex process which looks at the entire building and how it can be holistically improved.

Topics covered will be specifically for the Interior Design profession and will include issues such as specifying low impact materials, reducing water use, maximising natural ventilation and daylight and the upcoming Green Deal.

Real life case studies of several building types will illustrate best practice solutions for healthy interiors - see more details inside.

The Green Register - Pioneers in Sustainable Construction Training

Are you...

- concerned about how your interior design business can survive in the economic downturn?
- realising that there is potential work in the refurbishment sector as fewer people move home/office?
- wanting to meet a growing demand for eco-refurbishment advice and services from your clients but currently lack the information and know-how?

The Green Register is running a fascinating training course, using actual case studies and designed to provide all the information interior design professionals and architects will need to advise their clients on sustainable refurbishment of their buildings, both residential and commercial. This seminar is supported by the UK's pre-eminent professional organisation for interior designers the British Institute of Interior Design (www.biid.org.uk)

The speakers will address a range of issues relevant to Interior Designers including choosing the most environmentally sound choice of materials, the use of natural ventilation and daylight, the Ska rating system for commercial refits and details of the Government's new scheme to encourage eco-retrofits - The Green Deal, to be introduced in October 2012. Case studies will be from the residential, commercial and hospitality sectors. There will also be a number of environmentally sound interior materials and products on display.

Participants will be registered on The Green Register's website under a new 'Eco-Refurbisher' listing, designed to easily identify them to new clients. Please note: The Green Register's Eco-refurbishment courses are extremely popular (this is our eleventh course on the subject) and regularly sell out so do book early to avoid disappointment.
